Insurance Commissioner's
Annual Report
2006

Mike Kreidler
Insurance Commissioner

About This Report:

The preamble to the Washington State Insurance Code (Chapter 48, RCW) says:

"The business of insurance is one affected by the public interest, requiring that all persons be actuated by good faith, abstain from deception, and practice honesty and equity in all insurance matters. Upon the insurer, the insured, and their representatives rests the duty of preserving inviolate the integrity of insurance."

This report, which is required under RCW 48.02.170, includes the statistical summaries compiled in the insurance marketplace in Washington. The statistical tables themselves are extracted from exhibits filed with the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC). While this data is historically reliable and complete, any statistical project of this magnitude may contain errors, and neither the NAIC nor the Commissioner makes representations or warranties with respect to the accuracy or the completeness of the data and statistics in this report.

Climate change, fraud and illegal incentives: 2006 was quite a year

The Office of the Insurance Commissioner's highlight reel of 2006 includes replacing our 20-year-old computer system, concluding a detailed investigation into the use of inducements and incentives by title insurers, and establishing a fraud investigation unit within the agency.

Our agency's conversion from an outdated mainframe computer to a more nimble and efficient business-based system was completed on time and under budget. The new system will simplify life for our agency staff and the industry we regulate, increasing speed and efficiency in our daily dealings with insurers, agents and brokers, and the insurance-buying public. It has also laid the groundwork for a series of improvements over the next two years that will allow most of the business transactions with this office to be conducted online.

The legislatively authorized Special Investigations Unit was up and almost running by year's end, embarking on its mission to root out organized insurance fraud and the extra $200 to $300 in estimated costs that it adds to the average Washington household's insurance premiums each year.

A 10-month investigation into the use of incentives and inducements by title insurers revealed the widespread and pervasive use of illegal spending to steer business to their companies. The investigation found that title insurers were lavishing thousands of dollars worth of gifts, gratuities, junkets and other incentives on real estate agents and brokers and others in an effort to influence business referrals. We're mounting a vigorous enforcement effort.

Meanwhile, I also convened a task force to study the issue of title insurance from the consumer's perspective, and report back to me with findings and possible legislative recommendations. The task force's report will be issued before year's end.

At mid-year, I held a summit in Seattle on an emergent issue confronting our industry: climate change and its effects. I believe that climate change may have a profound impact on insured losses and, ultimately, the affordability and availability of essential insurance. At the national level, I serve as co-chair of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners' task force on climate change. This is a topic you'll be hearing more and more about in the coming years.

Earlier this year, the Washington State Legislature approved legislation allowing the agency to streamline our regulation of the 94,000 agents and brokers who transact insurance business in this state. And we also received authority to shift our market conduct oversight of insurance companies to a more pro-active, consumer-driven process. We're just getting started on both of these fronts, and we'll have more to report in the future. So stay tuned!

Sincerely,

Mike Kreidler

Overview of the agency:

The Insurance Commissioner's Office has the responsibility of regulating the insurance business in Washington under authority granted by the insurance laws of this state. The people of Washington paid more than $25 billion in 2006 for insurance to 1,371 insurance companies, health care service contractors (HCSCs), and health maintenance organizations (HMOs). This figure includes money spent on life, health, property, casualty and marine insurance.

The Insurance Commissioner's Office was created by the first state Legislature in 1889-90, with the office first administered as an adjunct duty of the Secretary of State. It was made an independent state office in 1907, and the first Insurance Commissioner was elected in 1908. There have been eight elected insurance commissioners since then, including the current Commissioner, Mike Kreidler, who was re-elected to a second term in 2004.

At first, the main functions of the office were simply to register insurance companies that wanted to do business in Washington. The office primarily regulated insurance by exercising the compliance and penalty provisions of the State Insurance Code, although other duties included supervising insurance company formation within the state and monitoring the reinsurance market. Over the years, the Commissioner's duties expanded to include ascertaining that all authorized insurance companies meet and maintain stringent financial, legal and other requirements for doing business in this state.

Today, consumer protection is the most important job of the Insurance Commissioner. During the year 2006, the OIC investigated and closed 5,823 complaints, recovering $8.6 million for consumers. In addition, the Insurance Commissioner coordinates a wide variety of protective and assistance services for insurance consumers. For example, agency investigators follow up on consumer complaints, look into the circumstances of disputes between consumers and companies, and advocate for the consumer whenever companies have acted improperly. The Consumer Protection Division responds to thousands of questions from consumers every year and distributes published consumer guides that help Washington residents decide what type of insurance they need and how to go about purchasing it.

Other facts about the Office of the Insurance Commissioner:

- About 60 insurance companies and health carriers are domestic insurers with headquarters located in Washington. Domestic companies are scheduled for financial examination by the Insurance Commissioner's Office at least once every five years.
- Anyone selling insurance in Washington must hold an agent's license from the Insurance Commissioner. Overseeing the testing, licensing, continuing education and professional performance of the state's 95,000 licensees constitutes a major part of the insurance office staff's workload.
- The Commissioner is responsible for collecting a tax assessed on insurance premiums. This money directly goes into the state's General Fund. No General Fund money goes to the Office of the Insurance Commissioner. Instead, insurance companies pay a special assessment based on the business they do in the state, and that money is used to fund the operations of the OIC.

In addition, the OIC is responsible for collecting premium taxes paid by Health Care Service Contractors and Health Maintenance Organizations. All told, the OIC collects about $400 million in state tax revenue that is used to fund a range and variety of public services and programs.

- Consumers with insurance questions or concerns are encouraged to contact the Consumer Advocacy Program. Consumer Advocacy staff includes experts in all lines of insurance (auto, homeowner, life, disability, health, etc.) and provides free assistance and education to consumers. Consumer Advocacy has the authority to investigate formal complaints against insurers and agents, and to enforce insurance laws on behalf of consumers. For assistance, consumers may call the toll-free Insurance Consumer Hotline at 1-800-562-6900, access our Web site at www.insurance.wa.gov or send an e-mail to cad@oic.wa.gov.
- The Statewide Health Insurance Benefits Advisors (SHIBA) HelpLine is also a free service of the OIC. The SHIBA HelpLine provides specialized education, assistance and advocacy, including individualized counseling by trained volunteer advisors about your rights and options. For help with health insurance issues, call the Insurance Consumer Hotline at 1-800-562-6900.
- Agents, brokers and other insurance licensees may contact the OIC directly through the Consumer Protection Division at (360) 725-7263.
